Ending the HIV epidemic is truly a big, audacious goal. To reach this ambitious goal, the movement needs to implement. As we approach the roll-out of the federal plan to end the HIV epidemic in America, it is implementation. Representatives from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Health Resources and Services Administration, and the Indian Health Service will be joined by a panel of community members to discuss a continuum of care.

United by passion and driven by a common purpose, the HIV community has achieved stunning progress in envisioning an end to the HIV epidemic. But even as we celebrate the strides that have been made, it is not enough to make that vision a reality. Ending HIV will require that we all continue to work together to empower, educate, eliminate stigma, and educate patients and providers so that all of those impacted by HIV have access to care.

Please join us for a plenary presentation that celebrates the strength of the community response in the face of the epidemic and continue to accelerate progress toward ending the epidemic.

Biomedical HIV prevention is going to play a critical role in our collective efforts to end the HIV epidemic. As we continue to work to end the HIV epidemic, we must ensure that we are not leaving anyone behind. We must ensure that we are providing the resources and support that people need to access and remain in care. We must ensure that we are addressing the community mistrust of health systems, provide examples of successful multilevel/interdepartmental strategies, and perspectives from community members during their journey to access and remain in care.
